

Community Cancer Center

Roseburg, Oregon

The Community Cancer Center is three story, $10,000,000 state of the art cancer treatment center located on the Mercy Medical Center campus in Roseburg Oregon. This facility combines both radiation treatment and oncology, offering patients complete cancer care. State of the Art equipment is housed in 2 radiation therapy vaults encapsulated with 12 foot thick concrete walls; nuclear medicine vault, and a CT room.

The first floor is home to the Community Cancer Center. The second floor houses educational training rooms, offices for the American Cancer Society and other volunteer cancer organizations, as well as an oncologists office. The third floor houses two additional oncology physicians.

The Community Cancer Center is a non profit organization that has been operating in Roseburg for nearly 30 years offering cancer treatment to all people, regardless of their ability to pay. The project was funded entirely through private donations, grants, and fundraising.

The Center is scheduled to be open in April of 2009 and is proceeding under construction at this time.
